What local comprehensive plans tell us about future growth and development

A look at a composite of the 2040 local comprehensive plans submitted to the Met Council shows how local governments in the Twin Cities metro area are planning for shifts in market demand and growth, as well as issues like climate change. Many plans rely on “mixed-use” districts to guide future growth at higher densities than in the past.

Metro Transit buses outfitted as mobile vaccination sites

The Walz-Flanagan Administration announced the launch of mobile vaccination units this week to provide COVID-19 vaccinations to communities throughout the state of Minnesota. The mobile units are a key tool to ensure equitable distribution of vaccines, prioritize vulnerable and underserved communities, and reduce barriers to vaccination by going directly to communities. The Met Council, including Metro Transit, are among the partners in the initiative.
